FIGHTERS WHO ARE NERVOUS

Chicago, Aug. 19.—"Most of the big fighters have been interesting propositions before entering the ring," says an old timer who has the records and dispositions of every one of note at the tips of his fingers. "They tell me that Jeffries was ill-tempered and early before he began his battle at Reno, and that doesn't surprise me a bit. The night Jeff knocked out Fitzsimmons at Coney Island eleven years ago I saw him before he entered the ring and he looked as if he was going to prison for life."

"In the ring that night Jeffries was a solemn, determined looking fellow. The stolid expression of his hardened face did not change until poor Fitzsimmons had been counted out. Then a wicked smile illuminated the boiler-maker's bronzed features as his friends surrounded him and smothered him with congratulations."

"Jeffries displayed the same traits while he was training in California and at Reno. He was in an ugly mood a greater part of the time, and his sparring partners found it hard to humor him. That was his way, and he simply couldn't help it."

"Johnson Always Happy. Johnson, on the other hand, was always good-natured and in high spirits. He's never trained for a fight without displaying these bright qualities. It's true that he got hot under the collar two or three times, but it was only because of the negro's jocularity. Right up to the time that he was called to the ring Johnson's disposition was cheerful."

"Still, I am positive that Johnson was probably more nervous than Jeffries before he began the scrap at Reno, although he concealed his feelings cleverly. Jeffries slept like a top at his quarters every night at Reno, but I doubt whether Johnson enjoyed similar rest because of his nervous temperament and alertness."

"I never saw a fighter more cheerful before entering the ring than Ketchel. He always seems over anxious for the battle to begin. He laughs and jokes with his friends and never scowls. He's all life, fire, and ginger. He's often told me that he never worries and seldom loses an hour's sleep over a coming event."

"Jack (Twin) Sullivan and his brother Mike are a jolly pair before a scrap. They dance and sing together in the dressing room so that you would think they were preparing for a vaudeville turn. Yet it's an odd fact that neither will set the other in the ring. Mike says he gets too nervous when he goes behind his twin brother, while Jack declares that Mike rattles him when he's fighting."

John L. Confidence Personified. "John L. Sullivan was always confidence personified before he climbed through the ropes in the old days, and he was also sour tempered. He was as proud as the proverbial peacock, and believed he could outpunch any man on earth, yet on several occasions I heard him mumble a prayer. He did that before he tackled Corbett in New Orleans in 1892."

"John always carried under his belt some religious medals his good old mother gave him. When he was training at Canoe Place Inn, down on Long Island, for the Corbett fracas Sullivan was never out of a bad humor. He wrangled constantly with the late Phil Casey, his trainer, and refused to obey the latter's instructions. John did pretty much as he pleased. He poked when he felt like it, and didn't deny himself anything in the way of food and drink. When friends advised him to work harder he usually closed them away."

"Sullivan seemed to have a grudge when he entered the arena at New Orleans to fight Corbett for a $25,000 purse and $10,000 a side. He growled at his seconds and glared at old friends over his ropes. He was just like an old grizzly bear, but when Corbett began to put it all over him he was a pitiable sight."

Willie Lewis Is Religious Boy. "Willie Lewis is a religious young man. I've seen him kneel and pray in his dressing room before several fights, and even as he sat in his corner waiting for the sound of the gong, I've seen his lips move as if in prayer. Jack Dempsey also asked for Divine blessing before all his battles. He was a good man morally and had a warm heart."

"Did you ever see Deacon Stonewall Jackson of Boston, who says a prayer on his knees in the middle of the ring before he engages in a fight? The deacon's stentorian voice can be heard by those at the ring side as he asks for mercy, salvation, strength, and a few silver coins to help his church along in this wicked world, after which he does his best to knock the other fellow's block off."

"Tommy West, who defeated Joe Walcott, told me recently that all pugilists before a mill are nervous, whether they show it or not. "I've known courageous pugilists that trembled from head to foot when they got into the ring. They needed a few hard wallops to steady their nerves, you know. For that matter, some fighters are not worth a rap until they've been hit hard. Then their blood begins to boil to a white heat."

Some of the Nervous Kind. "Among the highly strung, nervous fighters I've seen can be classed such men as Kid McCoy, Jack Dempsey, Jack McAllister, Abe Attel, Jimmy Britt, Bob Fitzsimmons, George Dixon, Pat Moore, Johnny Coulton, Jimmy Barry, Joe Gans, Jack Skelly, Jim Driscoll, Owen Moran, and Jim Corbett—and that reminds me that Corbett was in a class by himself in point of nervous tension."

"I recall the day that Corbett fought a truckman named Eder Courtney before the kinetograph over at Edison's in Jersey. It was the first time moving pictures were taken of a glove contest. Six rounds of one minute each were arranged and it was up to Corbett to knock his man out in the last round."

"Courtney was the greatest kind of a novice, yet Corbett was so nervous as he prepared for the one-sided scrap that Brady found it hard to quiet him. Jim whistled to wear side-kick gloves, while Courtney wore eight-ounce mitts, so that the knockout would be a sure thing, but after a long wrangle Corbett agreed to put on six-ounce gloves. When the men got into the eight-foot ring Corbett was shaking like the leaves in a gale, but the moment he knocked Courtney down in the first round he recovered his usual composure and was a typical fighting machine."

PROSSER CASE GOES TO JURY

LIBBY, Mont., Aug. 18.—The case of Mrs. Vera Prosser, charged with the murder of her divorced husband, Reese T. Prosser, aboard a great Northern train near here, was given to the jury this evening, following brilliant argument by State Senator Thomas D. Long for Mrs. Prosser, in which he declared with great dramatic effect that "Mrs. Prosser had every right under the laws of God and man to kill that man when she did."

When Senator Long began his argument and began recalling acts in the lives of the couple, Mrs. Prosser began to moan and cry, her cries increasing until she became hysterical. County Attorney Malden assailed the insanity plea and declared expert testimony was valueless, as it could be bought for so much per expert, and asked the jury if it was not strange that Mrs. Prosser had a gun with her at the time she was seized with temporary insanity.

POLITICS WILL AFFECT STOCKS

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—For the first time this week today's stock market evinced a reactionary tendency, with a generally lower level of prices. None of the declines was serious, nor was there any enforced liquidation, but rather of realizing for profits with some attendant bear selling.

The general belief is that political events of the next few days are bound to leave their impression on the securities market. Wall street is devoting marked attention to the conflict in the Republican party. The market opened with recessions of a point or more in many of the active issues, and soon was lower on unfounded rumors dealing with the alleged serious illness of the best known member of the Standard Oil party. Partial recovery was made from these setbacks, but the list displayed more or less hesitation for the balance of the day and closed at or near the lowest prices. Advances from middle banking sources were mostly that last month's liquidation had clarified the financial atmosphere in that section. Further light was thrown on the country's financial trade situation by the publication of an official statement from Washington concerning imports and customs receipts for the first year under the new tariff. It puts total imports for the 12 months ending July 31 at $2,922,131,181, of which slightly less than 50 per cent entered free of duty. Imports during the year were larger than in any corresponding period in history, and the volume of those entering free of duty the largest ever known in any corresponding period.

Custom receipts for the year were $327,873,672, a larger total than in any other year except 1907, when the total was about $3,000,000 larger. London was again a seller in this market, to the extent of 25,000 shares. The Bank of England increased its proportion of reserves to liabilities to a point well above that of last week, and its total reserves also were larger.

The Bank of France reported a trifling loss in gold and a large gain in treasury deposits.

Bonds reflected the tone of the stock market by their irregularity. Total sales, par value, $1,870,000.

change this morning was the bear raid on Columbus Consolidated, which has been strong for several days. $2 cents the stock was forced down to 75 cents today. During the regular board call 1,900 shares changed hands. During the open board session the stock recovered slightly, getting as high as 80 cents, 800 shares changing hands at that price and at 79 cents.

Iron Blossom was stronger today and sold at 82 cents. Stouss was also up to 24 1/2 cents today. For the first time in several months there was a sale of Ely-Calumet, 500 shares being sold at 16 cents. South Columbus Consolidated was at 14 cents today. This is due to the consolidation that will shortly be put through.

The total number of shares sold this morning was 25,900 and the amount represented by the transactions was $7,650.35.

On the curb market Opey again hit the toboggan and slid down by jumps. The stock opened at 36 and before the end of the open board trading it was at 31 1/2 cents. The sales on the curb were 200 shares of Opey at 36 cents, 100 at 35 1/2, 100 at 35, 50 at 32 1/2, 5,400 at 32 and 1,000 at 31 1/2.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—As a result of difficulty in getting a jury for the second trial of Lee O'Neil Browne, charged with buying votes to elect William Lorimer to the United States senate, State's Attorney John W. Wayman, announced today he would attack the system of drawing veniremen as soon as the Browne trial is ended.

"It is a frightful commentary on the conditions in our courts," said, that of 700 names drawn only eight men were considered capable of trying this case. More than 90 per cent of the men drawn are those of men just twenty-one years old, young clerks and mechanics. We have had almost no leading men of business."

Four veniremen were in the box when court adjourned today. They have been accepted by the defense and questioned by the state's attorney here today outward bound and the jury completed.

QUEBEC, Aug. 18.—The jail still houses Dr. Crippen and Ethel Le-neve tonight, notwithstanding the report they would leave for London this morning. They had been expected to sail on either Royal Edward or the Lake Manitoba, both of which touched here today outward bound.

Inspector Dew said he was waiting for certain orders before taking the prisoners back to England, but the source of these orders could not be learned.

BOLIVIAN MURDER AMERICAN CITIZEN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—News of the murder in Bolivia more than two months ago, of Gustav A. Rist, an American citizen, reached the state department today. Only the bare announcement of the murder was made. The news came from Mr. Combs, the American minister at Lima, Peru,

Scratch a Match and Turn the Value

It is a true axiom that nothing is perfect until it is simple. All our men of middle life will remember the old powder-horn, cap-box and shot pouch; how cumbersome and slow it was when loading the old-fashioned shotgun. But now it is different, the cap, powder and shot are all in one shell.

How unpleasant it must have been for Martha Washington and all the ladies of her day to cook in the old fire place with its dutch oven and spit. If time could only be unrolled and bring them back to life again, how pleased they would be to work in one of our modern kitchens where gas is used. It would be like a dream to them until they could be convinced of its reality.

One lady says, "I would not sell my gas stove if I could not get another." An engineer on the Short Line says, "I cook my breakfast since I put in the gas, but it is too quick for me—it gets things ready before I can get dressed."

Gas is the thing all right, try it.

The robbery was perpetrated early in the morning and two suspects are now in jail at Forsyth. In addition to the men mentioned, five others also were held up and small amounts taken from them. A brakeman was compelled to hold up his hands, but the highwaymen did not go through him. Nearly $100 in cash was secured.
